Division Principle

The team brainstorms and thinks through every section together. The group's thinking process — including sub-group debates, rejected attempts, multi-option comparisons, and team-wide decisions — is documented directly inside the report itself (e.g. the three discussions in §2, the rejected decomposition attempts in §3, the strategy options in §6, and the worked design examples in §8).

- Lead: responsible for writing the draft and synthesizing the group's ideas into the final text.
- Support: reviews the draft, checks consistency with other sections, and fills in missing details.
- All: the entire group contributes equally; every member participates in thinking and writing for that section.
